The stock agencies listed below, and the more than 1300 photographers listed on the following pages have had one or more images published in National Geographic Magazine from January 1986 through 1995. We believe that nearly all these images were provided to Geographic under one-time use agreements.

National Geographic Society has taken the position that they have the right to re-use these images on a new 30 disc set of CD-ROMs without compensating the image creators in any way. The magazine claims that the copyright law gives them this right and that the agreements signed over the last several decades, which said that Geographic would pay for additional uses, are not operative in this situation.

We believe it is critical to challenge this position, if editorial photographer are to have any hope of receiving re-use fees from Geographic - or any major publisher - in the future.

Review the names on this list. Contact anyone you know to make sure they know what is happening. Ask them to join in the fight to protect our right to receive compensation for secondary uses of our images. If we fail to stand our ground now, it won't be long until every major publisher insists on a bundle of re-use rights (particularly electronic uses) for the stock or assignment fees that are already extremely low. Initially, we are asking photographers or agencies who have ever been published in National Geographic Magazine to contribute a minimum of $50, (or $2.00 per image if you have had more than 25 images published in the magazine) to fight this battle. For more details call or write Jim Pickerell.

These names reflect only ten years of contributors to the magazine. Everyone who has ever been published in National Geographic Magazine has a legitimate claim for compensation for this use. We are interested in contacting every non-staffer who has ever been published in the magazine in its 108 year history.
