● Mr. KASTENMEIER. Mr. Speaker, I bring before the full House the bill H.R. 4222. The general purpose of the legislation is to correct several drafting flaws in the Federal Courts Improvement Act (Public Law 97-164), signed into law by President Reagan on April 2, 1982, and effective on October 1, 1982.

As you may recall, the Federal Courts Improvement Act created the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit [CAFC] by merging the preexisting U.S. Court of Claims with the former U.S. Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. The act further created the U.S. Claims Court, pursuant to article I of the Constitution, from the former trial division of the Court of Claims. Finally, the act contained several significant improvements to Federal judicial machinery.

Before discussing H.R. 4222, I would be remiss if I did not notify my colleagues that the changes made to the Federal judicial branch by Public Law 97-164 are all working quite well. This observation is not only my own, but has also been made by representatives of the executive and judicial branches of Government. My subcommittee is monitoring quite closely whether the CAFC, a somewhat specialized court, is tilting one way or the other in the patent law area.

Let me now turn to an explanation of the legislation before us. For Members who want a more indepth explanation, I cite the House report (No. 98-619) that has been filed on this bill. In brief, H.R. 4222 cures four drafting defects.

First, the bill clarifies that a circuit court—including the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit—which has jurisdiction of an appeal has jurisdiction of the certification of a controlling question of law.

Second, the bill amends the Tariff Act to provide that an appeal from a final determination of the International Trade Commission must be taken within 60 days. The genesis of this section was H.R. 1291, introduced by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK].

Third, the bill simplifies the procedures on appeals from the Patent and Trademark Office, U.S. Department of Commerce, to the CAFC mainly by eliminating the outmoded requirements of titles 15 and 35, United States Code, that the appellant set forth "reasons of appeal" when the appeal is filed. Chief Judge Howard Markey and Judge Giles Rich, two highly respected circuit judges on the CAFC, both with extensive experience in patent law, deserve commendation for bringing these administrative improvements to our attention.

Fourth, and finally, the bill provides that the individual who was serving as the marshal of the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia—under 28 U.S.C. 713(c)—after October 1, 1982—the date of enactment of the Federal Courts Improvement Act—may continue to so serve.

H.R. 4222 is supported by the Judicial Conference of the United States, the U.S. Department of Commerce, and the U.S. Department of Justice. There is no opposition.

Before concluding, I should mention that the proposal will save the Federal Government approximately $100,000 annually.

I urge unanimous support and I yield back the balance of my time.●

● Mr. MOORHEAD. Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of any opposition to this legislation—hearings have been held, it was marked up at subcommittee and full committee and no opposition was expressed at any level.

H.R. 4222 does three things which are primarily technical in nature:

First, the 1982 act which established the new Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit created an unintended situation of having interlocutory appeals in patent cases go to the geographic circuits and final appeals directed to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. H.R. 4222 would have both types of appeals go to the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit;

Second, the time limit for an appeal from the International Trade Commission [ITC] used to be 60 days, this was inadvertently removed and H.R. 4222 puts back into the law the 60-day time limit within which appeals for the ITC must be taken; and Third, it simplifies procedures for appeals from the Patent and Trademark Office and also provides that the Commissioner of Patents does not have to transmit certified copies of documents to the courts but that a certified list of these documents will suffice unless the court specifically requests certified copies. This new procedure will save time and money.

I urge support for this legislation.●

The committee amendment was agreed to.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed, and a motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
