The Senator from West Virginia (Mr. BYRD), for Mr. DECONCINI, proposes an amendment numbered 3170.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

9. On page 4, lines 4-5, strike out "with respect to the rights retained";

10. On page 5, line 19, strike out "third" and insert in lieu thereof "another".

Mr. DECONCINI. I am pleased that the Senate consented to proceed to the immediate consideration of S. 1626 and then voted to pass the bill as reported by the Judiciary Committee with technical amendments.

Mr. President, this legislation will correct a major problem facing intellectual property licensees by clarifying the rights of parties if a licensor declares bankruptcy. Under recent court decisions such as Lubrizol Enterprises, Inc. v. Richmond Metal Finishers, Inc., 756 F.2d 1043 (4th Cir. 1985), cert. denied, 106 S.Ct. 1285 (1986) a debtor may reject as an executory contract any license agreement involving intellectual property. This effectively terminates the licensee's use of one-of-a-kind technology without regard to the business that has been built around the technology. Intellectual property is inherently unique—by definition it cannot be replaced or purchased elsewhere.

The system of granting rights for the use of intellectual property, rather than an outright transfer of ownership, evolved to assure a full and fair development opportunity for patents, copyrights, trade secrets, and trademarks. Through the use of nonexclusive licenses, different commercial applications of intellectual property developed in different geographic markets.

Society benefits from the licensing of new technology because licensing increases the number of companies that can take advantage of an innovative or cost-saving discovery. But recent court decisions have changed the game. Potential licensees are now insisting on total ownership transfers to prevent the possible loss of rights during a bankruptcy filing.

In addition, this quirk in the bankruptcy law threatens American licensors competing in the international marketplace. Uncertainty over the law jeopardizes American technology licenses in the world market. I am pleased that the Senate is acting now to encourage full development of intellectual property in the worldwide marketplace.

S. 1626 amends section 365 of the Bankruptcy Code to permit a licensee of intellectual property to elect to continue to use that property, after a trustee rejects the license agreement, to the extent that the use existing immediately before the bankruptcy case commenced. The protection afforded by S. 1626 would be similar to that given by the code to lessees under real estate licenses. S. 1626 affects only the status of executory contracts for licenses of intellectual property, which is clearly defined in the bill.

This legislation has received wide support from the National Bankruptcy Conference, the business bankruptcy and intellectual property sections of the American Bar Association, the American Bankruptcy Institute, the Intellectual Property Bar and the Intellectual Property Owners. The House is expected to act soon on a companion measure and I am confident that the Congress will send a bill to the President to sign before we adjourn in October.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 3170) was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill is open to further amendment. If there be no further amendment to be proposed, the question is on agreeing to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, was read the third time, and passed.

(The text of the bill, S. 1626 will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the bill passed.

Mr. DOLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.
