

These papers are related to the second hearing on Bayh-Dole and its passage by the Senate Judiciary Committee.

I also included a document I found related to the introduction of an early version of the SBIR bill. This was later enacted in the following Congress. The foundation of SBIR was based on the ability of small business contractors to own patent rights because of Bayh-Dole.

So far, progress through Congress had been relatively smooth. That was about to change.