No. 21

By Mr. MATHIAS: S. 432. A bill to establish a Commission on the International Application of Anti-trust Laws; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

INTERNATIONAL ANTITRUST TASK FORCE • Mr. MATHIAS. Mr. President, the importance of exports to our country can-not be overstated. One of every eight jobs in this country is involved in ex-port; $1 of every $3 of U.S. corporate profits comes from international activi-ties; 1 of every 3 acres of farmland pro-duces for export; and exports now con-tribute more to our gross national product than private corporate investment does. Despite the importance of exports, the United States has lagged behind its major trading partners in export pro-motion. The U.S. share of international commerce has steadily decreased—from 27.7 percent in 1958 to 17 percent in 1979. 27.7 percent in 1958 to 17 percent in 1979. And the figures for 1980, although an improvement, suggest that the problem is still with us. In Germany, France, Italy, and the United Kingdom, exports account for more than 50 percent of all goods produced, while in the United States they account for merely 14 percent.

In December 1980, the President's Ex-port Council submitted its report to President Carter. The council found that a great deal can and must be done to increase our export effort, particularly in the area of removing self-imposed disincentives to U.S. exports. The council recommended that every reasonable effort must be made to facilitate U.S. exfort must be made to facilitate U.S. ex-port efforts and overseas operations by freeing U.S. firms from unnecessary antitrust constraints and uncertainties where U.S. consumers would not be ad-versely affected. To help accomplish this goal, the council specifically recom-mended the enactment of the bill which I am reintroducing today I am reintroducing today.

This bill passed the Senate last year without a dissenting vote. It would es-tablish a 12-month task force to study the extraterritorial aspects of U.S. anti-trust laws and their effect on our ability to compete overseas. Specifically, the task force would provide a forum to ex-amine the whole gamut of issues raised by the extraterritorial application of these laws, including how they interface with the laws of other nations, and what might be done to promote the doctrine of competition worldwide. The task force would report its findings to the President and to Congress, making rec-ommendations on what changes, if any, ommendations on what changes, if any, should be made in our antitrust laws to insure that they promote competition without handicapping U.S. business abroad and without causing offense to our trading partners. Extensive hearings were held on this bill last year before the Governmental Affairs Committee which reported the bill out unanimously. In addition to the President's Export Council, the bill has the support of many groups, including the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers. Last year it attracted over 20 cosponsors in the Senate. in the Senate.

If we are going to beat inflation and get our decelerating economy moving again, we have got to reduce barriers to trade. And if export promotion is to be-come a top national priority—which it must—we need a team effort, with the Federal Government removing unwar-ranted barriers and substituting creative ranted barriers and substituting creative ranted barriers and substituting creative incentives to exports. Like Churchill in another context, U.S. business execu-tives have asked us to give them the tools; they will finish the job. Once we remove the distincentives, they will get out and fight for their share of the world trade. More trade means more jobs for U.S. workers, a reduced trade deficit, and a sounder dollar. Whenever I discuss export policy, I recall the story of Alexander the Great and the Gordian 'knot. The Delphic oracle predicted that whoever unraveled the knot would rule the world. Shortly thereafter, Alexander, still trying to emerge from his father's shadow, strode up to the knot, looked at it thoughtfully for a moment, then drew his sword and cleft the knot a part.

for a moment, then drew his sword and cleft the knot a part. For too long, the trade debate has been bogged down in the technical language of experts who have a very narrow area of responsibility. We have passively adopted their terms of reference, and conducted the debate at the wrong level. We must now raise the level of the de-bate and talk in terms of national interwe must now raise the level of the de-bate and talk in terms of national inter-est and economic survival. My point is simple—if rational men and women were to sit down to devise a rational trade policy, they would not de-vise a policy anything like the one that burdens us today. Our trading partners do not so burden their business people, and we must get our laws in order if we and we must get our laws in order if we are to remain competitive in interna-tional markets. We have got to cut the Gordian knot that hobbles U.S. trade, not pick at its edges, and the task force I propose has an important role to play in this regard. I think we should encourage a dialog and not pretend that the problem does not exist. A Presidential commission, chaired by the Vice President, would provide such a forum for discussion, and I urge all of my colleagues to join me in support of this bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill appear in the RECORD following my statement.

There being no objection, the but was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:
